Foreword

When was the last time you talked to your spouse, family or loved ones about end of life?

While it is a subject that most people are uncomfortable with, it is important for everyone to consider what decisions need to be made and what wishes they would like fulfilled in the event of their passing.

Providing your family or loved ones with this information during periods of trauma or grief can ease the burden, while ensuring that your wishes are being carried out.

On behalf of Council on the Ageing (WA), I am delighted to introduce the Goodbye Guide which is designed to be a helpful tool in planning and collating important documents and information and critically, ensuring that your executor or loved ones are able to locate them at the right time.

The guide can be used by anyone and can even be used as a conversation starter.

Available in both hard copy and online versions, I hope you find the Goodbye Guide valuable.

Christine Allen
CEO, Council on the Ageing (WA)

Introduction

Have you ever been responsible for the affairs of someone who has died? If so, you know only too well how much easier it is, or would have been, if that person had left very clear instructions about the location of important documents and directions about how to access them, especially if they needed to be accessed electronically. Getting your affairs in order creates peace of mind for everyone concerned and results in far less work for those left behind.

What does ‘getting your affairs in order’ actually mean? Well, simply, it means making sure you know where all your important documents are and ideally putting them in one safe place and making arrangements to deal with any unfinished plans about your life, including your finances and your wishes.

In essence, it involves making sure the right people know your plans, where to find everything and any important information that will make things easier for your loved ones when you’re not there to tell them. Make sure several people you trust know where to find the instructions you have written down and the location of your important documents.

Prepare a special box, filing cabinet, safe or some central place to keep important documents. This is also handy if there is a fire or other emergency because you can ‘grab it and go’.

Another way you can help those who will be looking after your affairs is to have an annual clean out (be ruthless!) to ensure your important keepsakes don’t end up at the tip. Donate items of value to charities, clubs and your loved ones. Put important things (photos, medals, family history) in clearly marked boxes and regularly clean out that shed!

Most people are concerned about issues of privacy and confidentiality as it applies to details like passwords, pins and usernames. You need to include this information, where relevant (e.g. online banking details), so it’s important that you find a secure place to store this Guide. Alternatively, you could place all this sensitive information in a secure place specified in the Guide.

Because family members may feel uncomfortable about initiating end of life conversations, it’s a good idea for you to be prepared to do this. Some conversation starters could be:

- I need to think about the future. Will you help me?
- I was thinking about what happened, and it made me realise_____.
- Even though I’m okay right now, I’m worried that _____, and I want to be prepared.
- I’ve been speaking to my doctor, and s/he has asked me to think about a few things.

Finally, and importantly, make peace with everyone. Say what you want to say long before your life ends. Leave loving and positive memories for your loved ones to remember you by.

Chris Jeffery
Chief Policy Officer, Council on the Ageing (WA)

YOUR PAPERWORK

Having all of your paperwork up to date and in one place and informing someone of its location, will make it easier if a family member or trusted friend has to help you with financial and legal matters.

The documents listed in this booklet are intended to be a guide only; some documents listed may not be applicable to you. There may be other documents not listed which are unique to you and your situation that you may also wish to include.

For many people, the completion of a Will constitutes their 'paperwork'. Just as importantly however, you need to leave very clear and accessible directions about all aspects of your life and not just your final wishes.

PREPARING FOR YOUR FUNERAL

There are a range of options to prepare for your funeral, three (3) of the most common are: prepaid, bonds or insurance. These products have been created to offer you some control over your funeral arrangements and expenses, protect your family from unexpected financial issues and give you peace of mind to say goodbye.

Prepaid funerals, or advance payment plans, are part of a range of products offered by funeral businesses and directors. You arrange to plan, contract and pay for your funeral beforehand through your chosen funeral director, at current prices.

Depending on your wishes, funeral costs may involve director fees, transport, coffin or cremation processing, death certificates and permits, burial and arrangements. The final amount can vary considerably between businesses so it's essential to shop around for the best deal. By prepaying a funeral, you can cover some, or all of your expenses in full, make a deposit or pay it off in regular payments.

Currently in Western Australia, funeral directors are not required to put your money into a registered and regulated funeral fund to protect you against business closure. However, a new code of conduct will come into effect on 1 March 2021 that updates the rules on how such contracts and funds are managed.

Funeral bonds provide an investment account, paid out at the time for funeral expenses. After making an initial deposit, you make regular payments over time and increase the amount you have saved for a funeral with interest earned. You cannot withdraw your money early and its final amount can only be used for your funeral. Funeral bonds are offered by funeral directors, friendly societies and life insurers and allow you to choose a funeral director.

Funeral insurance involves taking out a policy and paying an ongoing premium to cover some expenses at the time of your funeral. Insurance provides immediate cover and a lump sum. However, exclusions apply depending on the length of time you have been covered by insurance. As with other insurance products, the amount you pay may increase over time and you don't receive a refund if you stop payments. If you are considering insurance, think about how much you may end up paying as well as your future income and premiums.

If you are thinking about preparing financially for a funeral, you can also consider setting up a term deposit or high-interest savings account separate from your everyday bank account or accessing your superannuation. Remember to tell your family and leave instructions so that they can use your savings the way you want them to. The following is a general checklist to help you plan for and make an informed decision about your funeral.

THE CHECKLIST

ISSUE	YES	NO	COMMENTS
Check if you already have funeral cover as part of bereavement payments, superannuation, health insurance or veterans cover.
If you are choosing a funeral product, shop around for different quotes and coverage.
When you decide on a product, ensure you understand the description or product disclosure statement and have the opportunity to ask questions.
Receive an itemised breakdown of all the costs, fees and charges involved beforehand.
Discuss extra fees and charges, including administration, cancellation, refunds and transfers.
Name your funeral organiser, and what happens if they are unavailable.
Check for a cooling off period and use it to re-evaluate your satisfaction with your product and decision.
Talk to a trusted person, financial planner or community worker about your decision.
Discuss your arrangements with family and friends and talk about what you want to happen.

About Council on the Ageing Western Australia

Council on the Ageing (WA) Inc. (COTA (WA)) was established in 1959 as the peak body representing the interests of people aged over 50 in Western Australia.

As a member of the COTA Federation, COTA (WA) collaborates with the other state COTAs as well as COTA Australia to advocate and influence (on a state and national level) on matters that are important to older Australians. In December 2018, the COTA Federation launched the first comprehensive national study of Australians aged 50 and over. Titled State of the (Older) Nation, the landmark national survey will be undertaken again in 2021. <https://www.cota.org.au/policy/state-of-the-older-nation>

In July 2020, COTA (WA) was formally appointed by the State Government as the first ever Vulnerable Seniors Peak in Western Australia. The announcement was made by the Hon. Mick Murray MLA, Minister for Seniors and Ageing; Volunteering; Sport and Recreation.

COTA (WA) represents the interests of Western Australia's seniors on many advisory committees and reference groups. Our advocacy work includes collaboration with sector partners on issues such as health, elder abuse, affordable housing, mature age employment and vulnerable cohorts including Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander, CaLD and LGBTI.

COTA (WA) delivers community presentations on request:

- Mall Walking
- Strength for Life (formerly Living Longer Living Stronger)
- Aged Care System Navigation
- Mentoring 2 Work

Publications currently in circulation are:

- The Goodbye Guide
- The At Home Guide

Acknowledgment of Country

COTA (WA) acknowledges the Traditional Owners of Country. We pay our respects to their Elders both past and present and acknowledge that the land on which we live and work, is and always will be, Aboriginal land.

Acknowledgment of Compatible Care

COTA (WA) acknowledges Compatible Care for its sponsorship of the printing of the The Goodbye Guide.
